STAIR CODES

Injuries on stairs are more common than you may think.

(Reuters Health) - More than 1 million Americans injure themselves on stairs each year, according to a study in the American Journal of Emergency Medicine.

So, it pays to focus on your stairs (both inside and outside of your home).

The following drawings are based on most of the common building codes in effect today. It may take a few minutes to understand what the drawings are saying but we recommend focusing on the subject for your safety, and that of your family.
